With F.M.L.

MORE DIRT MOVING

City graders are leveling dirt before putting down asphalt and aggregate sidewalks in the Mall block. Planting of shrubs and small trees will follow.

Courthouse block will link the new Mall block and parking area and ultimately the new jail block in a line of mall-like symmetry.

NOW-NOW-NOW

I can remember when the Herald was thought of as a place where somebody cranked out a midget daily on a press something like a mimeograph machine.

I can remember when it was considered neither a strong newspaper nor a modern newspaper plant.

Well, boys, all that is and has been changed for some time.

You are invited to visit anytime

some 15 departments your Herald has become, including:

Bookkeeping, circulation, display advertising, office supply, news-interview rooms, and executive offices, and,

Bindery, casting department, job pressroom-storage, and,

Composition, darkroom, platemaking.

NOW-NOW-NOW

Folk Fete was fun. It was broader based than in the past. It should continue to grow.

It will help Cameron mature, even though the town was founded in 1846. It is part of a developing small city, shaking the hay from its hair, pulling the straw from between its teeth.

Cameron can be proud of its cultural programs, its industrial development, its symphony visits. If "past prologue," even better things await.

Area Roundup

Electric Rates Up 30%

GEORGETOWN

The Central Texas energy crunch will hit Georgetown electrical customers next month right where it hurts - in the pocketbook. The city council at its next meeting will raise the price of electrical power by 30 percent, straight across the board, retroactive to June 1. Necessity for the increase was a 57 percent price increase handed to the city by LCRA, which supplies the city's electrical system.

Groundbreaking For New Hospital

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the new King's Daughters Hospital are tentatively set for 1 p.m. June 13, the hospital administrator said. Construction of the proposed five-story hospital is to begin shortly thereafter and is expected to be completed in two years. The new 85,000 square foot building will be constructed on a grassy slope west of South 31st Street and South of Loop 363.

Grand Jury Indicts 40

GATESVILLE

Forty defendants were named in 45 indictments returned by a Coryell County grand jury at the close of a two-day session. This output falls short of the number of indictments found by Coryell grand juries in the recent past, but 26 complaints charging marijuana possession didn't go to the grand jury because of a recent change in the law. The 63rd Texas Legislature passed a law making possession of less than four ounces of marijuana a misdemeanor rather than a felony.

Patrons Fuss About School Revamp

WACO

Waco school board members seem to be about the only persons pleased with the suggested revamping of the public schools to meet requirements of a federal judge. School officials say they haven't heard of much dissatisfaction, yet the Blacks and Browns have held protest meetings while the Whites are grumbling, seeking to petition for the rejection of the proposals as submitted by the school attorney.

Fete Is Lively Success

Thousands of local and out of town visitors were busy Friday and Saturday participating in the city's fourth annual Folk Fete, held this year at National Guard Armory.

Ethnic food booths, arts and crafts, and other displays dotted the Armory grounds, while inside the building music ranging from country-western to Czech singing was heard Friday.

Saturday's festivities got underway with a colorful parade downtown that morning, ending with trophies awarded to outstanding entries.

Lunch was available at food booths as ethnic menus offered a choice of delicious eats to the crowds.

Live music filled the air outside the armory as Don Shuffield and his Western Swingsters played and sang on the grounds.

Inside the armory, band music and folk dances took over the entertainment side of the Fete, and fiddlers contest and domino tournament drew their own crowd of spectators.

Dances on Friday and Saturday nights in the armory completed the weekend's festivities.

Annual Stiles Field Day Planned

Milam County farmers and ranchers are planning attendance at the 11th Annual Stiles Farm Foundation Field Day June 19, when Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby will be the featured speaker.

The farm is located one mile east of Thrall in Williamson County or U. S. Highway 79. Field day activities will begin at 2 p.m.

Hobby, a native of Houston, is president and executive editor of the Houston Post Co. He is the son of the late William P. Hobby, who served as Governor of Texas from 1917 to 1921.

The lieutenant governor will headline a 5 p.m. program and will be introduced by Dr. John E. Hutchison, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Dr. Jarvis E. Miller, director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, will serve as master of ceremonies.

Bill Schlecht, president of the Taylor Chamber of Commerce, will welcome field day visitors. Comments will be made by Clyde H. Wells, president of the Texas A&M University System Board of Directors and a trustee of the Stiles Farm Foundation.

New Hours Set

For Texas Chief

The Texas Chief, Amtrak's Houston-Chicago passenger train, apparently will continue to operate through Temple and Central Texas as new schedule hours beginning Sunday were announced.

The chief will pass through Temple going north at 1:13 p.m. and south at 4:28 p.m. No route changes are proposed.

A&M Dean of Agriculture Dr. H. O. Kunkel will introduce the Stiles Scholarship winners. The invocation will be by Rev. David L. Bulgerian, pastor of the St. Paul Lutheran Church, Taylor.

Tours of crop and livestock enterprises beginning at 2 p.m. will feature narrow-row cotton, twin seed grain sorghum, beef cattle production, crossbred cattle, large hay bales, preparing cotton for the gin and establishing forage grasses.

Field day visitors will also have an opportunity to visit information booths located at the farm headquarters. The booths will be manned by Extension Service specialists and Experiment Station researchers. Visitors are urged to bring their questions regarding any phase of crop and livestock production to these experts.

A barbecue sponsored by the Taylor Chamber of Commerce and the businessmen of Williamson County will conclude field day activities.

The Stiles Farm has been in operation since 1961 as a demonstration farm for the Central Texas Blackland area.

Band Members

Score At State

Five member of the Yoe High School Band went to the state solo and ensemble contest this month at the University of Texas at Austin.

Gary Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Meyer of Cameron, won a first division rating on his clarinet solo.

Winning a third division was a clarinet quartet including Gary, Cindy Clark, Sue Ann Kennedy, and Mary Blake.

Donald Czapinski is band director.

Saddle Maker Started Out Young

By Kathryn Kahler

"I just learned the hard way," said Curtis Barron, local saddle maker and horse trainer, speaking about his experience in saddlemaking and leather tooling.

Barron and his wife were living in San Angelo during World War II. "My wife started working in Leddy's Boot shop, and I joined her. Neither of us liked working in the boot shop and wanted to transfer to the saddle shop. Finally he transferred us," said Barron.

In 1948 Barron and his wife who had both been raised in Milam County, moved back to the Milam area, and began making saddles here. He concedes that his wife knows as much about tooling leather as he does.

"It takes about a week to make a saddle. You start with the tree (the frame) which is made of wood and covered with rawhide. That's what makes the strength in it.

"Then you stretch wet leather over it." He explained that the leather comes in sides and not in hides. Wetting the leather makes it easier to stretch over the tree.

Before wetting the leather, it has to be cut to fit the tree. After that, the leather is cased -- wet, stretched over the tree and left to set over night.

After it has been cased, "you take it off the tree and tool it." He explained that when you take it off the tree to tool it, the leather is the shape of the tree. Barron then marks the design and tools the leather.

Tooling is quite an art, and Barron's shop in Marlow Community is full of saddles he has made and tooled.

Barron 64, has an old foot peddle sewing machine he says "must be older than I am" on which he sews the pieces of the saddle together before adding the brass conchos that also hold different pieces of the saddle together. He also sews sheep skin to the skirts of the saddle to protect the horse's back.

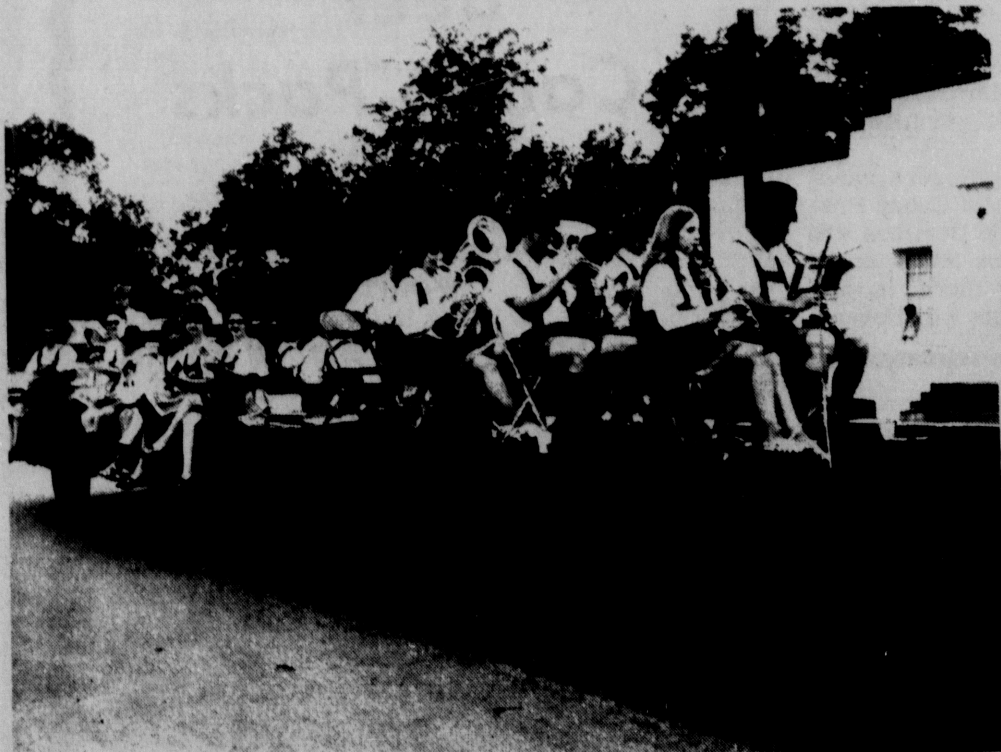

In addition to making saddles, Barron has made belts, heel boots, and girths, but concedes that now he mainly does repair work. He has turned the belt making over to Paul McDermott, a neighbor's son, and taught him to make them.

Not only have the Barrons taught Paul to work with leather, but are proud of a room of trophies Paul has won riding his horses. "We've always taken Paul to horse shows. He's been our constant companion since he was 18 months old."

The Barrons have three registered horses that (he and Paul) ride. "I ride a little every day. I even get out there and rope with the kids," said Barron. He also told about how he and his wife rode in rodeos as a profession. "My wife rode barrels, and I roped calves." Barron started riding when he was "just a kid. I've always had a horse around. When my wife and I were first married, we traded eight wild pigs for our first horse."

In addition to leather tooling, saddle making, and riding he also trains horses and raises cattle. Said Barron, "Someone once said that I'd do anything you could get me to do, and I guess that's about the truth."

Too Giant A Step?

Inflation is the major concern for government.

It is having its wearying effect on almost all segments of the economy. And it is going to have interesting ramifications.

A proposal has passed the U. S. House for a raise in the minimum wage from $1.60 to $2.20. The increase is about 35 percent and will be, interestingly enough, deflationary on the people it means to help. It follows another increase in payroll social security.

The additional hour income will require more productivity for the minimum wage worker, whose capacity for greater productivity as a group, not as individuals, may be limited. And larger numbers of minimum wage people may find automation substituted for them, whereas automation has been supplanting middle-management decision makers and higher paid production workers.

Inflation seems to have us legislating productivity, because inflation hardly encourages us to be any more productive at 35 percent more per hour.

Major labor unions have been conciliatory in wage discussions this year. Perhaps this is why. But, it would be fair to ask how many minimum wage people will be out of jobs if their productivity cannot possibly increase even a portion of the amount being asked and approved in the U. S. House.

It would seem staging would be best, as has been done in prior minimum wage years, and consideration given to how much more our workers can earn in an emerging world labor market. Or how many will lose their jobs. Or how many goods will be priced higher in inflationary times that almost all elements of our society care to pay, but who still seek the means.

We're not sure a 35 percent increase at this time is the solution for people who need relief, but who may be hurt rather than helped by too giant a step.

Designate From Kansas City...

A man from Kansas City is the new designate for director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

He is Clarence M. Kelley, present chief of police in Kansas City, and 21 years an FBI agent before taking the police job. He is chosen from a field of 27. And President Nixon said in announcing Kelley's nomination that Kelley's political affiliation was not known.

He will succeed, upon Senate confirmation, stand in William L. Patrick Gray, III, who resigned upon being linked to materials involved in Watergate.

FBI morale has suffered in the past year because of J. Edgar Hoover's 47-year tenure ended by death and a lack of direction under new leadership.

Kelley's problem is finding that new direction. His record in Kansas City is a reduction of 25 percent in crime, restoration of police morale, discipline and promoting innovation. His efforts in police technology, according to one report, likens him to "Dick Tracy," the cartoon detective who employs all the modern gadgets.

Kelley says he thinks "crime could be curbed without sacrificing human rights and dignities."

And he finds the press a "strong barrier against repressive law enforcement."

He is apparently the ideal man. The FBI needs him.

Western Residents Note Startling Ease In Peking

BY James Pringle

PEKING

Reuter--The strain of a Strauss waltz played on an accordion wafted over a park in central Peking recently.

Elsewhere, Chinese gardeners enjoying a rubber of bridge in a garden invited a foreign diplomat to join them.

On May day, Premier Chou En-Lai's wife, Teng Jing-Chao, strolled hand-in-hand with American film actress Shirley MacLaine in a park, then talked with her for two hours over orange drinks in a pavilion.

And a few days later, workmen began removing 11 giant billboards in Tien An Men square bearing the slogan "Unite To Win Still Greater Victories." Their disappearance opened up a beautiful vista south of the Gate of Heavenly Peace to Chien Men Gate at the southern entrance to the old city of Peking.

At state functions in the Great Hall of the People, Chinese officials are talking more openly to diplomats and correspondents than ever before.

But the London and Vienna Philharmonic orchestras have performed in Peking since then, and word is out that western classics can be played again for the first time since the cultural revolution without charges of "capitalist roading" being levelled at the musician.

During the past three months, in fact, residents in the Chinese capital have noticed a startling easing in the political climate.

"It's become more relaxed in the past few months than in the whole of the previous year," one diplomat here said. "I can hardly believe I am in China any more."

Strauss on an accordion might be routine in many countries. But the sight of a Chinese in a grey cotton "Mao suit" squeezing out "The Blue Danube" is uncommon here--and would have been unthinkable last year.

Bridge and poker are the most popular card games in China--though gambling is strictly forbidden. The bridge-playing gardeners were almost certainly intellectuals undergoing re-education through physical labor.

But inviting a foreigner to join them would scarcely have been possible until this spring.

Visiting the beautiful Ming tombs northwest of Peking recently, a correspondent who stopped to admire the view over the amphitheatre of hills bid good-day to a Chinese peasant woman carrying a child in her arms who was waiting for a local bus.

The woman, from one of the villages of the "13 tombs" peoples commune, asked the foreigner for a lift--and had her first ride in an automobile.

Foreigners picnicking at the tombs that day did not feel that the villagers had been told by a commune revolutionary committee that they could now ride in a foreigner's car. It was just, they believed, that her interpretation of the new climate was that such contact was now no longer out of line.

Chinese these days are often refreshingly willing to talk about the "unthinkable." And the unthinkable in China until very recently included topics like sex and crime.

An American law professor recently witnessed divorce proceedings in Peking where one of the partners had committed adultery. And other visitors have said their Chinese hosts have been prepared to discuss some matters relating to sexual problems.

TREE GUN

One man, using a newly developed gun, can now plant 1,600 forest trees a day. Only 10 men can plant a 40-acre farm in a day to grow timber for homes, paper and man's other forest-oriented needs.

Tour Produces Few Solutions

BY Albert Clack

BUENOS AIRES

Reiter--U.S. Secretary of State William Roger "Latin American tour has produced few immediate solutions to controversies between Washington and nationalist Latin governments."

But the main sources of friction were apparently discussed with nearly all nationalist governments--an emphatic exception being that of Fidel Castro's Cuba and the way was paved for a Nixon tour.

In two weeks, Rogers visited Mexico, Nicaragua, Venezuela, Peru, Colombia, Brazil and Venezuela, and talked in Buenos Aires with Chilean President Salvador Allende and the foreign ministers of Panama, Ecuador and Bolivia.

Washington enjoys good relations with Brazil, Colombia, Venezuela and Nicaragua, diplomats say, so attention focussed on contacts with other governments whose links with the White House have been under strain.

The 70-minute surprise discussion with Marxist Allende was regarded as the tour's high point.

Chilean relations with Washington dipped two years ago when copper mines were nationalized and compensation to U.S. firms was refused on grounds they made excessive profits and ruined machinery.

This led one U.S. company to seek to establish in courts of buyers countries of Chilean copper that, until it was compensated, it should receive payments currently accruing to the Chilean state for deliveries from a mine it formerly owned.

The Chilean government may partly have to hank these efforts by the so-called "Yankee economic aggressors" for improving its strength in the Santiago congress in elections earlier this year.

But another big factor contributing to anti-American feelings in Chile was the accusation last year that the U.S.-owned International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation (ITT) and the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) had plotted to prevent Allende from taking office after he was elected in September, 1971, and to overthrow him after he took office two months later.

Rogers is the highest-ranking U.S. official to have met Allende. What transpired between them was kept secret, but Latin Americans will be awaiting Nixon's Latin American itinerary with particular interest in whether it will include Santiago.

To judge by Rogers' careful avoidance of Cuban President Osvaldo Dorticos who was in Buenos Aires at the same time, there is no detente in sight with Havana.

Algeria Plans Wall Against Desert

By John Rogers

ALGIERS

Reuter -- Algeria is planning to build a "great green wall" to prevent the constant gradual erosion of fertile land by the sand of the Sahara Desert.

Or rather, to plant the wall - for it will consist of millions of pine, eucalyptus and other trees.

The project will take many years to complete and comprises the planting of trees along a belt about 940 miles across Algeria from the Moroccan to the Tunisian frontiers.

The "wall" will be between three and 12 miles thick and will cover a total of between five and 7.5 million acres.

In the long term, the government hopes the barrage of trees will stop soil erosion and encourage the growth of vegetation on barren steppe-land where sand is gradually encroaching - opening it up to crop cultivation and livestock grazing.

It also hopes that the planting of trees will change the climatic conditions in the pre-Saharan belt below the fertile strip of northern Algeria, greatly increasing rainfall and humidity.

"To make war on the desert, you have to help nature by reconstituting and speeding up the colonizing process of vegetation," says an agriculture ministry expert.

"Perhaps we can extend the humidifying influence of the green barrage to the south - maybe we can then even make the desert go backwards."

Work on the "green wall" project is expected to begin next autumn, along a line roughly 375 miles south of the Mediterranean coast.

It will run south of the "high plateau" steppe land in the west and follow roughly the line of the Atlas and Aures mountains, running south of the towns of El-Bayadh, Aflou, Djelfa, Bou-Saada and Barika to join the Tunisian border south of Tebessa.

Micronesia Islands Seek Compensation For WW II

Jon Anderson
SAIPAN

Reuter--Twenty-eight years late, Western Pacific islands devastated by World War II battles between U.S. and Japanese forces now have an opportunity to seek compensation for their losses.

The result has been a revival of memories of the deprivation and the horrors of aerial and naval bombardment that reduced some of the tiny, idyllic islands to piles of rubble.

The names are familiar to military men and World War II buffs--Peleliu, Kwajalein, Saipan, Eniwetok, Tinian and Truk.

The islands, now part of the U.S. administered United Nations Trust Territory of the Pacific, were systematically turned into fortresses by the Japanese invaders. Then they were methodically destroyed by U.S. planes and guns.

Four years ago Japan and the United States finally concluded an agreement to accept some small responsibility for the damage inflicted on the region known as Micronesia.

The U.S. Congress in 1971 also provided some $30 million to meet so-called "Post Secure Claims," arising after the hostilities ended but before the U.S. military occupation ended but before the U.S. military occupation ended in 1971.

Neither the U.S. nor Japan acknowledges any liability, but money, and in the case of Japan, goods and services, are now being offered to Micronesian war victims.

Since late last year teams have been fanning out through the scattered island districts to explain the procedures and help islanders file their claims. A one-year filing period until this October has been designated.

The Micronesian Claims Commission, headquartered on Saipan--one of the Pacific wars worst battle-grounds--is investigating each claim to decide a fair settlement. By the end of 1976 the process is expected to be completed.

There is resentment, however, among local people at being kept waiting so long for recognition of their suffering and losses, particularly by Japan, whose contribution is so small and includes no money.

One critic is Susumu Aizawa, a magistrate on the island of Tol in the huge Truk lagoon--where more than 50 Japanese ships lie as a result of U.S. air raids. Aizawa has written an open letter to President Nixon and Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka to try to emphasize in human terms what cannot be explained in bureaucratic forms.

"The people of Micronesia were in no way responsible for the devastation and suffering," he wrote, "Yet (we) suffered far more from the hostilities of your governments than did your own nations."

"Granted, in absolute terms your nations sacrificed more, but a far greater proportion of our nation was exposed to the agonies of war. Almost all of those alive at the time (less than the present population of about 100,000) suffered in one way or another."

Aizawa said Truk was not the site of a major island battle, but was the location of a major Japanese naval complex that was subject to heavy U.S. air bombardment.

He claimed the Trukese were "virtual slaves of the occupying Japanese forces," forced to give up their homes and their women.

The magistrate also recalled how an air-strip was built with conscripted Micronesian labor drawn from all districts, a good many of whom died from exhaustion or from beatings for failing to fulfill work quotas.

"Many swam, clinging to pieces of wood, the many miles to their homes on the other islands in the Truk lagoon."

"Those who were caught were beaten to point of unconsciousness and often death. Some were hung from trees by ropes attached behind their backs to their wrists and ankles, and beaten in that position."

Aizawa also claimed many Trukese died in U.S. air raids when they were forced to make boat trips carrying ammunition to Japanese gun emplacements in the reef surrounding Truk lagoon.

He concluded, "No claims procedure can completely compensate the people for what they endured. But Japan should compensate the people of Micronesia. Not only would such a payment at least partially compensate Micronesians for their sufferings, but also serve as a reminder that man should treat his fellow man with dignity and respect."

House Ag Committee Votes Food Stamp Change

WASHINGTON

A House Agriculture Subcommittee voted to make certain changes in the Food Stamp program, some liberalizing and some restricting existing eligibility requirements for recipients.

By a 7 to 1 vote, the Ad Hoc Subcommittee adopted an amendment offered by Congressman W. R. (Bob) Poage, D-Texas, Chairman of both the full Agriculture Committee and the Subcommittee, which would make food stamps available to patients in duly established nonprofit drug and alcoholic rehabilitation centers.

Such individuals are barred now from eligibility for food stamps as patients of such clinics because of provisions of existing law aimed at unrelated persons living in "communes."

Chairman Poage drafted the amendment after sponsors of drug and alcoholic rehabilitation centers in New York City and elsewhere testified that the restriction in the present law was actually hampering their efforts to cure addicts, some of whom as individuals were actually eligible for food stamps before going to the centers for treatment, but then because of their living at the center, they became ineligible.

The food stamp provisions are being considered for inclusion in legislation designed to extend the Agricultural Act of 1970 which expires December 31, 1973. Actually, the authorization for funding the food stamp program expires June 30, so the Committee is endeavoring to get the new Agricultural Act which was broadened to include the food stamp provisions enacted by the end of June.

The Ad Hoc Subcommittee voted 6 to 0 to adopt an amendment which provides that persons shall be ineligible for food stamps if the household's financial resources, including both liquid assets and the equity in non-liquid assets exceeds $1,500.

Poultry Industry Expanding

The poultry industry in Texas isn't just "chicken feed" or "pin money" any more. A check of the value of this industry shows gross income from production of eggs, chickens and broilers during 1972 totaled more than $3,500,000.

Several years ago, almost every farm had a small flock of chickens. But that situation has changed, and the poultry industry in Texas is a dynamic, progressive leader in the state's agriculture picture," Texas Agriculture Commissioner John C. White noted.

The gross income figure for poultry during 1972 was up about $100,000 from 1971. Of the 1972 gross, 51 per cent was from egg production, and 46 per cent was from boiler production. Egg production in Texas during 1972 showed a slight decline from 1971. Broiler production in the state, however, was up four per cent in 1972 from the previous year.

Egg prices to producers averaged 30.9 cents per dozen during 1972, down slightly from 1971 levels. Broiler prices for 1972 averaged 14.1 cents per pounds which was up slightly from 1971.

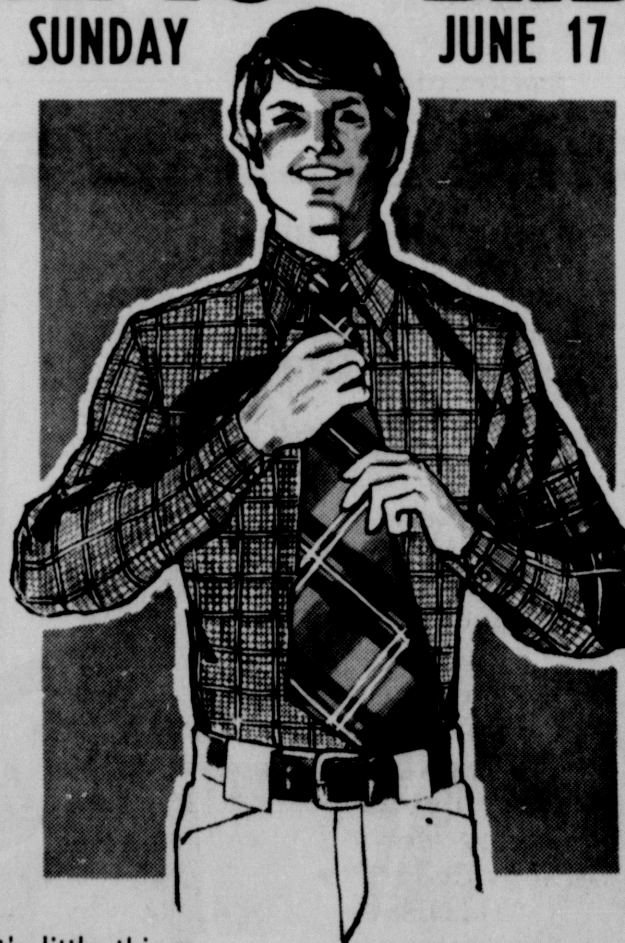

"Consumers who are on the lookout for good buys in food should take a close look at the egg. Eggs are one of the best protein buys on today's market.

"With eggs at 75 cents per dozen retail, you are paying only about 50 cents a pound. Compare that with other foods and you can see why eggs are such a good buy," White said.

Highway Men Saluted For Hard Winter Work

AUSTIN — The more than nine thousand maintenance employees of the Texas Highway Department today were saluted for their work during the worst winter and early spring in recent history.

A letter of commendation from the Texas Highway Commission went to the heads of some 250 maintenance sections in Texas.

"The past few months serve to remind us of the skill, courage and dedication of you and your crews in emergency situation," the letter said.

Highway Department maintenance crews are based in almost every one of Texas' 254 counties. Primarily, their job is to keep the highways in good condition, patching pavements, making minor repairs on structures, picking up litter and caring for natural vegetation and landscaping along the roadside, upkeep of Texas' 1,100 safety rest areas, roadside parks and turnouts and other tasks involved in good highway housekeeping.

In the process, maintenance crews often act as Good Samaritans, coming to the aid of stalled or stranded motorists.

But in times of natural disaster, the crews put in long hours clearing snow and ice off the highways, sanding bridges and putting out warning signs and flares.

When the weather -- usually high water -- forces the closing of a highway, maintenance men put out barricades and pass the word so that the Austin office can notify the press, law enforcement agencies and the travel information services of the Department and private industry.

After great disaster, highway maintenance crews often initiate the cleanup. Since highway crews are based nearby and have the necessary heavy equipment handy they often turn to assisting communities with clearing away debris just as soon as highways are restored to service.

Fence posts can be spaced eight feet apart for most styles.

EPA Proposing Guidelines For Solid Waste Disposal

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is continuing to push for more effective disposal of solid wastes.

The agency is presently proposing guidelines for land disposal and large-scale incineration (thermal processing) of municipal solid wastes, points out Dr. John Sweeten, agricultural engineer for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Sweeten is a specialist in animal waste management at Texas A&M University.

The new guidelines will be mandatory for all federal facilities or agencies that are either directly or indirectly involved in solid waste management. In addition, the guidelines will apply to all state and local government agencies.

The design, construction and operation of both sanitary landfills and incinerators are discussed in the EPA guidelines.

The guidelines are being developed with EPA funds for solid waste management.
